

Finding Time for Fitness

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recommends getting 30 minutes of moderate activity, five days a week. Some days, that may feel impossible. Here are several ways to fit in activity when time is not on your side:

- Choose the stairs when you can.
- Take the long way when you have time.
- If you drive, park your car as far away from your destination as you can. If you take public transportation, get off one stop early, and walk the rest of the way.
- Walk over to a coworker to ask a question instead of sending an email.
- If you travel for work, plan ahead by choosing a hotel with a gym or bringing a jump rope to use in the room.

Making these small choices to be active can add up throughout the day and help you reach your health and wellness goals.

Define This! Primary Care

This is the general health care you receive, including regular checkups or visits for colds and aches and pains.

You may need to see a primary care doctor before you see a specialist for a condition.
